Art by Florian Jonak

Introduction

This book contains over 200 adversaries and environments compatible with Daggerheart. Like Daggerheart, we decided to start with the fiction to create these Incredible Creatures. We found talented artists who created inspired images and asked ourselves, "What would this look like in Daggerheart?" Then we made groups of adversaries around that art, building on the fiction based on their environment and lore. We hope Incredible Creatures inspires you and your players for years to come.

USING THIS BOOK

Incredible Creatures has adversaries that range from Tier 1 to Tier 4 across most environments. Our goal was to provide Game Masters with creatures that can fit into heroic fantasy stories like those found in the campaign frames in Daggerheart's Core Rules. We purposefully pushed the boundaries of the adversary system to create different, interesting features. These are not reskins or upscaled versions of what you would find in Daggerhart's System Reference Document (SRD), these are wholly new creatures designed from the ground up just for our amazing, supportive community.

When playing with these creatures, please keep the following things in mind.

START WITH THE FICTION

We began by looking at these pieces of art and creating stories around them and where they might be found. Then we built "families" of adversaries that fit into the locations we envisioned. Finally, where we could, we incorporated an environment that helps to tell the story we saw from the art. Some of these "families" include themes designed to fill gaps missing from the SRD while others are wholly new creations. If you see something that doesn't quite fit your narrative, feel free to make adjustments to best serve your table.

GUIDANCE FOR PLANNING ENCOUNTERS

We have playtested these adversaries extensively, both at our tables and with backers who gave us invaluable feedback. Here's what we discovered about the system:

- An environment that does damage should account for 1–2 Battle Points (BP) when you include it in an encounter depending on how often you expect to use it.
- Some of our adversaries have social features and aren't relegated strictly to their role as combatants. This doesn't change encounter calculations, but you are encouraged to use these features to deepen the narrative and create meaningful engagement with the player characters. Remember to ask questions and build on the answers.
- When dealing with phase changing adversaries, you should account for both stat blocks when calculating BP. For example, the Dollmaker Hag is a Support that has a phase change to a Leader. If you decide to frighten your players with this creepy creature, count them as 4 BP (Support + Leader).
- Countdowns are dependent on your group size. We designed the countdowns in this book for 4 PCs. If you have more, consider adding 2 to the countdown. If you have less, take 2 away.

ORGANIZATION AND DISTRIBUTION

The adversaries are categorized first by Tier—1, 2, 3, and 4. Because we built most of these in "families," as mentioned before, we kept them organized in these groups, which often have an environment attached to them as well. We decided this might be more helpful when looking for adversaries for a particular encounter you have in mind. An alphabetical listing of a Plurodin or a Glom'llagh doesn't really tell you much when you're hunting for something in a pinch (though we have provided an alphabetical index in the back). In addition, you'll find adversaries of similar environments or types within proximity of each other within each Tier section.

We wanted to give you a broad range of adversaries, but we also recognized that some might be more useful than others, particularly when it came to Tiers of play. Tier 1 only encompasses one level and there are more options to choose from in that Tier than any other in the SRD. So, while we created quite a few creatures for introductory play, we focused the bulk of our efforts in Tiers 2 and 3. Similarly, Tier 4 will likely see less play overall because few campaigns will progress to those final levels. That said, we have some fascinating and challenging entries for those who engage in high level play and wish we could see the faces of your players when they come across these "best of the best" at your tables.

Remember too, you can always scale an adversary up or down by tweaking their numbers—Difficulty, Thresholds, damage, etc. Darrington Press's Homebrew Kit, as well as Chris's Guide to Making Custom Adversaries, are free resources which can guide you in that process.

THANK YOUS

This book was made possible by the "Incredible" support of the Daggerheart community. We would like to extend special thanks to the amazing talents at Darrington Press, without whom this book would not have been possible. We also want to say thank you to our contributors from across the community, the artists who inspired our work, the playtesters who made the book better, and most of all our crowdfunding backers who surprised us with an amazing outpouring of support.

YOUNG EARTH DRAKE

Tier 1 Bruiser

A wingless dragon-like creature whose scales resemble dirt clods that occasionally crackle with static electricity.

Motives & Tactics: Eat, grow, defend territory, sleep

Difficulty: 14 | Thresholds: 8/16 | HP: 7 | Stress: 3

ATK: +1 | Claws: Melee | 1d8+6 phy

Experience: I'm Bigger Than You +2

FEATURES

Tough Hide - Passive: When the Drake takes physical damage, reduce it by 3.

Chomp - Action: Make a standard attack against a target within Melee range. On a success, spend a Fear to deal an additional 1d12 physical damage and the target must mark an Armor Slot without receiving its benefits (they can still use armor to reduce the damage). If they can't mark an Armor Slot, they must mark an additional HP and you gain a Fear.

Stomp - Action: Spend a Fear to slam the ground with the Drake's powerful legs, creating a shockwave. All targets within Close range must make a Strength or Agility Reaction Roll. On a failure, they take 1d10 magic damage and are Vulnerable until they clear a Stress. On a success they take half damage.

When it triggers, the target is Restrained and Unconscious; they can't make action rolls, can't speak, and automatically fail all reaction rolls. All creatures that the Cockatrice has turned into trees clear both conditions when the Cockatrice is defeated.

Penetrating Peck - Action: Make a standard attack against a target. On a success, spend a Fear to force the target to mark an Armor Slot without receiving its benefits (they can still use armor to reduce the damage). If they have an Arborization Countdown, tick it down by 1. If they can't mark an Armor Slot, they must mark an additional HP.

What illusions do these flowers create? Where might the dreams lead them?

Gloamtrap Pit - Action: Spend a Fear to introduce a pit covered with moss and grass. All PCs walking must succeed on an Agility or Instinct Reaction Roll. Targets who fail fall into the pit, taking 1d6+3 direct physical damage and are Restrained by vines until they succeed on a Strength Roll (10) to break free and climb out of the pit.

Grasping Vine - Action: Spend a Fear to choose a target within Close range to make a Strength Reaction Roll. On a failure, the Gladeservant Envelops them and the target must mark 2 Stress. When the Gladeservant takes Severe damage, falls Asleep, or is defeated, all Enveloped targets are freed and the condition is cleared.

THE ABANDONED MANOR

Content Warning: Family/Child Death and Possession

The following section includes depictions of family death and spiritual possession of objects. Check with your players to see if they are comfortable with this content.

MAP: MANOR HOUSE, FIRST FLOOR

Map by Alan Tucker

BACKGROUND

More than a week ago, an elderly couple (ancestries up to you) named Filor and Erza Touchstone lost their daughter, Nell, and her husband, Kai in suspicious circumstances in the couple's home, along with two live-in servants. The Touchstones' granddaughter, Billie, is missing and it isn't known if she was also a victim or if she might have been kidnapped or run away. Local officials are stymied and have largely given up on solving the case.

Rumors abound that the home is now haunted or is cursed. The Touchstones wish to gain some closure regarding their family tragedy and determine the fate of their granddaughter, so they've hired the party

MAP: MANOR HOUSE, SECOND FLOOR

Map by Alan Tucker

to investigate, hoping they might provide a fresh perspective. A key is provided to the front gate and the house the PCs are sent on their way.

> This encounter isn't intended to be deadly, but a fun and spooky story.

Read or paraphrase the following:

> You arrive at the front gate, key in hand. The day promises to be heavily overcast, lending a gray overtone to the grim nature of your task.

> We recommend 1 Dolliglop for every 2–3 PCs.

MANOR HOUSE, FIRST FLOOR

1: Front Gate
2: Entry Room: 5 exits, plus stairs leading to second floor
3: Study: Kai's journal is here
4: Bathroom
5: Carriage House
6: Pantry/Storeroom: some items have been picked through as if someone had been looking for food
7: Kitchen
8: Dining Room

All areas are neat, but have a light layer of dust from several days of no use.

> Upon entering the house, the party feels a sense of foreboding and dread. Begin the Possessed Abode environment.

The Forlorn Spirit(s) could be either Billie's parents or the live-in servants. It is up to you to decide what and how much information they might impart to the PCs. The Spirits are distraught and should present difficulties to communicate with.

While combat is likely to happen, it isn't the main objective of this encounter. Play up the creepiness and mystery. The Dolliglop feeds on emotion and Billie's attachment to her doll, Missy is like honey to the creature.

MANOR HOUSE, SECOND FLOOR

1: Sitting Room
2: Broken Bedroom: This bedroom belonged to one of the house servants
3: Broken Bathroom
4: Broken Bedroom: This bedroom belonged to one of the house servants
5: Billie's Bedroom
6: Bathroom
7: Nell and Kai's Bedroom

All areas are neat, except for the "broken" rooms, but have a light layer of dust from several days of no use. You could reveal some small footprints in some places to heighten interest if necessary.

The Dolliglop(s) seeks to escape if the situation turns against them. How the PCs negotiate with Billie and figuring out a way to separate her from her doll is key to having a satisfying and happy ending to the encounter.

CONCLUSION

The Touchstones are thrilled to get their granddaughter back and happily hand over anything promised to the PCs.

Further adventure can be had in determining where the Dolliglops came from or, if they escaped, tracking down the troublemaking creatures.

BETTER WITH FRIENDS

Weejits are strange little creatures who have the ability to gather together and become something more than the sum of their parts. They gain different abilities and mannerisms depending on how many Weejits are in a particular collective. The HP for each grouping tells you how many Weejits comprise it. When a collective takes damage that doesn't defeat it, the Weejits can either become a new grouping indicated by their current number, or they can disperse and group with others nearby to form new collectives. When a number of Weejits equal to or greater than half of how many began the scene have been defeated, the remaining Weejits disband their collectives and attempt to flee.

THE WISHMAKER GLADE

For centuries, the people of this Wildborne community have inscribed their wishes on polished stones and hung them from the branches of a blessed tree in a sacred glade, parchment with their names fluttering in the breeze. Local legend says that the tree is a conduit to the spirit world, allowing spirits of hope and dreams to visit our world and grant the wishes of mortals. The wish tokens, imbued with the hopes and dreams of the locals, attracted Wish Spirits—remnants of the legions created by the gods as they formed the world. These spirits gather the wish tokens and sometimes their power can bring those wishes to life.

Wish Spirits are drawn to mortal settlements, and especially to places where mortals dream big and make wishes. Wish Spirits are shy and stay out of sight, but will collect tokens or representations of mortal wishes. They communicate only in flashes of emotion, conveying visions of dreams fulfilled or thwarted.

The community grew prosperous as the best dreams of the locals came to fruition with the assistance of the Wish Spirits. But in recent months, word of the glade and the spirits has spread across the region. Hundreds of new visitors are rushing to the glade. As the number of wishes grows catastrophically, the spirits are overwhelmed. And, in the rush to fulfill the dreams, many Wish Spirits have become tangled together. Contradicting wishes confuse the spirits, making them unpredictable, and their attempts to satisfy mutually-exclusive wishes are leading to chaotic and dangerous magical phenomena.

ENCOUNTER GUIDE

When the PCs arrive in the town that hosts the Wish Glade, they quickly hear about how the glade is now "cursed," but that tourists and travelers continue to venture inside to make their wishes, ignoring or disbelieving the locals' warnings.

The glade itself shows signs of over-use and bears the signature of several types of magic.

Let the PCs explore the glade for a while, engaging with the "Wish-Holder Tree" and the "Thin Veil" features. Then, depending on how you want to escalate the scene, you might wait for them to trigger the "Drawn to Hope" feature, or you might introduce a group of antagonists with "Trampling Tourists" or "Tangled Desires".

MAP: WISHMAKER GLADE

Map by Alan Tucker

When the glade grows crowded, emphasize how overuse and conflicting desires have transformed this once peaceful place of reflection and hope into a dangerous jumble of conflicting desires that is tearing apart the very metaphysical fabric of the area.

When a Wish Spirit Knot appears, show how it is erratic and conflicted, and indicate the possibility of disentangling it as a way to restore the glade.

A NOTE ON WISHES:

> Fulfilling a wish can have a huge impact on the world of your story, so it's important to work with players to discuss the scale and type of wishes the spirits can fulfill and that the wishes don't tread over any content/safety calibration decisions the table has made—this is especially relevant to wishes that involve changing people's emotions or memory ("I wish Justan loved me" or "I wish everyone forgot that I stole the Malediction Key").

WISHMAKER GLADE

Tier 2 Exploration

A blessed glade hosting a large twisting tree with purple leaves. The nearby community hangs wish tokens from the branches, which are now heavily-laden as tourists swarm the glade to make their own wishes. The grass is trodden and worn down from heavy foot traffic.

Impulses: offer hope to the downtrodden, gather wishes like seeds, draw in wish spirits

Difficulty: 14
Potential Adversaries: Cultists (any), Chaos Skull, Demanding Crowd, Merchant, Wish Spirits (any)

FEATURES

Wish-Holder Tree - Passive: At the center of the glade stands a large purple-leaved tree with numerous branches, all laden with wish-tokens hung by string and parchment inscribed with the dreamers' names. PCs can investigate the scene with an Instinct or Knowledge Roll. On a success with Hope, learn all three pieces of information below. On a success with Fear, learn two. On a failure, a PC can mark a Stress to learn one and gain advantage on the next action roll to investigate this environment.

- Three wish tokens fused together in a strange shape, crackling with magical energy.
- Broken and unfulfilled wish tokens scattered around the glade.
- Clusters of wish tokens are tied together as if accidentally tangled by some outside actor.

How else can PCs tell this glade has been trampled by too many visitors? What wishes can be read from the tokens that remain?

Thin Veil - Passive: Numerous attempts by Wish Spirits to satisfy contradictory dreams has left the fabric of reality in the glade dangerously loose and unpredictable. The area bears the signature of several types of magic, some natural to the area, others foreign and illogical. When making a Spellcast roll, PCs must replace their Hope die with a d10.

How does the weakened veil manifest physically? What small magical effects linger at the edge of your perception?

Aura of Possibility - Passive: The first time each scene that a PC with 0 Hope enters the Wishmaker Glade, they gain a Hope. PCs that Prepare in the Wishmaker Glade gain an additional Hope.

What about the glade inspires such enduring Hope? What possibilities seem within reach that would normally seem impossible?

Trampling Tourists - Action: Introduce a Demanding Crowd, travelers and tourists heedless of the warnings and insistent on having their turn getting wishes granted. The Demanding Crowd immediately takes the spotlight.

Who is the loudest among the group, or is there no formal or informal ringleader? Does the crowd view the PCs as hogging the glade for themselves or as interlopers trying to prevent people from having their wishes granted?

Tangled Desires - Action: Spend a Fear to introduce a Wish Spirit Knot, which appears at Close distance and takes the spotlight.

What contradictory wishes attracted the Wish Spirit Knot? How can you tell that the cluster of spirits is confused?

Drawn to Hope - Reaction: When a PC makes a wish and hangs a token on the tree, introduce a Wish Spirit, which appears within Close distance and takes the spotlight.

How does it approach the token? How does the glade react to the appearance of the spirit? Does wind cause the branches and leaves to ripple? Does the air grow cool yet comforting?

Tug of War - Reaction: If a PC loses their last Hope (not spends, only loses), gain a Fear as the emotional resonance of the glade shifts toward dreams denied.

What thwarted dream is the PC reminded of when they lose their last Hope? How does growing Fear manifest in the glade?

WISH SPIRIT

WISH SPIRIT

Tier 2 Social

A primal spirit of creation drawn to the emotional power of a genuine wish, seeking to make mortals' desires come true.

Motives & Tactics: Avoid danger, bring wishes to life, kindle hope, read hearts

Difficulty: 13 | Thresholds: 8/16 | HP: 4 | Stress: 3

ATK: +1 | Chill Touch: Melee | 2d6 mag

Experiences: Inspiration +2, Intuition +2

FEATURES

Ephemeral - Passive: The Wish Spirit is resistant to physical damage.

Flickering Dream - Action: Wish Spirits possess incredible power, but only within the realm of making mortals' wishes come true. Mark a Stress to bring a mortal's wish to life within the bounds of the current environment until the end of the scene. At the end of the scene, the Wish Spirit must mark another Stress or the wish dissipates, leaving the mortal with just the memory of its brief appearance.

Heart's Desire - Action: The Wish Spirit reads the emotions and intentions of a creature within Close range. The target may allow the spirit to read their emotions or make a Presence Reaction Roll to conceal their desires. If they allow the spirit to read them, they gain a Hope.

Tenuous Hope - Reaction: When a Wish Spirit marks its last Stress to sustain a wish, ask the player that made the wish to roll a Hope die (if the wish is especially large in scale or requires substantial changes to the lives of others, roll two Hope dice and take the lower result). If the result is higher than the current Fear count, the Wish Spirit gives up the last of its life force to make the wish permanent. If the result is equal to or lower than the current Fear count, the Wish Spirit cannot maintain its magic and the dream dissipates. All present must succeed on a Presence Reaction Roll or lose 1d4 Hope.

WISH SPIRIT KNOT

Tier 2 Horde (1/HP)

A cluster of confused Wish Spirits, their tethers to wish tokens tangled and knotted together in a confounding muddle of contradictory wishes and desires.

Motives & Tactics: Gather up wish tokens, make contradictory changes, give people what the knot thinks they want.

Difficulty: 14 | Thresholds: 10/20 | HP: 5 | Stress: 4

ATK: +2 | Frozen Embrace: Melee | 2d12 mag

Experiences: Inspiration +2, Intuition +2, Overbearing +2

FEATURES

Horde (2d6) - Passive: When the Wish Spirit Knot has marked half or more of their HP, their standard attack deals 2d6 magical damage instead.

Confused Wishseekers - Passive: The Knot approaches mortals as they make wishes, eagerly adding those wish tokens to their collection and trying to satisfy multiple wishes at once.

Disentangle - Passive: A PC can attempt a roll to disentangle the Wish Spirit Knot, physically using Finesse, socially using Presence, or magically using their Spellcast Trait. On a success, replace the Wish Spirit Knot with a number of Wish Spirits equal to the Knot's unmarked HP. Each of these resulting spirits marks a Stress and the GM loses a Fear.

Ephemeral - Passive: The Wish Spirit Knot is resistant to physical damage.

Contradictory Dreams - Action: Mark a Stress as the Knot tries to grant several contradictory wishes at once, warping reality around the Knot. All creatures within Far range must succeed on a Strength Reaction Roll or mark a Stress as reality shifts to try to accommodate mutually-exclusive dreams. If half or more of the PCs fail the roll, gain a Fear.

Shattered Hopes - Reaction: When an attack succeeds against the Wish Spirit Knot, force the attacker to make an Instinct Reaction Roll. On a failure, ask the player to share one of their character's wishes, then describe how they experience a momentary vision of how it would feel to have that wish thwarted forever and lose a Hope.

Broken Knot - Reaction: When the Wish Spirit Knot marks their last Stress, ask the nearest player to roll their Hope die. If the result is higher than the current Fear count, the strands connecting the Wish Spirit Knot come loose. Replace the Knot with a number of Wish Spirits equal to the Knot's remaining unmarked HP and each PC within Far range gains 2 Hope.

DEMANDING CROWD

Tier 2 Social Horde (3/HP)

A group of tourists from across the region, here to make wishes and be seen participating in the local custom. Demanding, incurious, and unwittingly making everything worse.

ATK: +0 | Clubs and Knives: Melee | 2d8 phy

Antisocial Entitlement - Passive: The members of this crowd believe that they're owed fulfillment of their wishes. Rolls to convince them to disperse or give up on making wishes in the glade are made with disadvantage.

Heckling & Harassment - Action: Spend a Fear to force all targets within Far range to make a Presence Reaction Roll or mark 2 Stress. If the Demanding Crowd has half or more of their HP marked or all their Stress marked, targets that fail only mark 1 Stress.

Panicked Trampling - Reaction: When Demanding Crowd marks HP or Stress, they move a Far distance around the scene, trampling over any target in their way. Anyone they move past/through must succeed on a Strength Reaction Roll or be knocked over and trampled, taking 2d6 physical damage.

THE DOLLMAKER

A hamlet on the edge of a forest has called upon the adventurers to help with nightmares. Each night the adults in town dream of a pair of children that disappeared nearly a month ago and now they haunt the dreams of adults in the town. Though the dreams are not easily remembered, those who have them remember precious few things: a pair of children crying out for help, a burning fire, freezing ice and a chiding voice telling them to take care of their most vulnerable or the dreams will continue. The city's mayor, Bernard Wyman, is sure that this is the work of a hag that lives in the nearby forest and contracts the PCs to end these nightmares.

The adventure begins with the PCs entering the forest searching for the hag to end her reign of terror.

GM PREP

Once the party enters the forest, you can use the Unsettling Forest as a traversal. In this instance, the Dollmaker Hag, Pearl, creates dolls that look like the party members hanging from trees. Use this to have a party member describe themselves, but as if they were a doll.

When the party reaches their destination, they discover a bog (map area 1) filled with Young Alraune (al-rahw-nuh) and a Bunyip that towers over them. (Use 1 Bunyip and half the number of Young Alraune as there are party members. The Alraune start Hidden.)

OPTIONAL RULE

DEATH MOVE: PERFECT LIKENESS

Given the nature of the Totem of Fear and the creepiness of the Dollmaker Hag, GMs may want a way to give PCs alternative options for storytelling. Talk with a PC that either falls to a Totem of Fear, or to the Dollmaker/Puppetmaster if you like this alternative.

Death Move - Perfect Likeness: Your character is dead, but its Totem of Fear has become a perfect likeness, a role you now fill. Clear all HP but mark all Stress as you take the weapons and armor of the dead. Work with your GM to alter your experiences to become something more sinister.

You also gain the following card which doesn't count against your loadout's domain card maximum of 5 and can't be placed in your vault.

When the Bunyip has marked half or more of its HP, Pearl exits her hut (map area 2), asks them to leave her poor guard alone and invites them in to chat. Her Arcane focus is a sewing table in the room you can draw attention to. She has two servants (Totems of Fear) that look like dolls of the kidnapped children. One, Rose, looks like a doll that has been pulled from a fire. The other, Misty, looks like it has suffered from hypothermia and is missing its nose. The PCs would recognize these two from pictures drawn of them by townsfolk as the missing pair of children. This might be enough to set the party to attack, but violence might not be the first thing they jump to.

Pearl might explain to them that the owner of the local orphanage made a deal in earnest with Pearl. Her wish was to find homes for all the children under her care as she was getting older and unable to care for her charges. The dreams have done much to encourage the people of the city to adopt children, but still the nightmares continue until each one has been adopted.

This could encourage the party to make a deal with the hag. Pearl will want a sentimental item and everything that goes with it. If a PC agrees, ask them to describe the item (perhaps one of the items from character creation) and a memory that is attached to it. After doing so, narrate that memory becoming hazy and distant until it disappears altogether. They might also find the children safe in another room, playing contentedly or trapped in a magical cage.

They also could discover that the mayor had dealings with the hag as well, though what this deal might be is best left up to the characters to decide.

What kinds of items attack the PCs? Is there a way to stop them?

Devilish Deals - Action: Spend a Fear to make a life changing offer to a PC within Close range. A PC who accepts the deal gains a version of the deal that is twisted in some way that may not be immediately apparent. The Hag summons a Totem of Fear, designating the PC as the doppelganger. A PC who refuses the deal must succeed on a Presence Reaction Roll or mark 2 Stress.

What way does the hag twist the deal? What do they take from the PC that makes it?

FRIEND SHAPED?

While it's unclear whether the Hakturi are fae, plant, or beast, one thing about them is certain: they are a mischievous menace.

Hakturi communicate in purrs and delightful chitters and seek out those who wish to explore the world and perform heroic deeds. The melon-sized creatures are typically cute and cuddly when first encountered and seem to enjoy taking on the role of pet or mascot to a group of adventurers. Their presence, however, soon becomes more bane than boon to any party.

Luring the unsuspecting to more of their kind seems to be the primary goal of a single Hakturi. In numbers, their underlying ferocity becomes evident and their danger to even a stout group of adventurers clear.

Do they crave shiny artifacts? Do they feed on raw emotions such as adoration or fear? Do they find the flesh of adventurers particularly tasty? None or all could be true, but adventurers should beware of the Hakturi.

GET YER POTIONS HERE!

There are two ways to approach this encounter. The first is to simply have the characters begin at an out-of-the-way shop which sells potions and tinctures (map area 1). They heard about this place and wish to stock up for their next adventure.

The second is to have the party hired by officials in a nearby town to investigate the odd storefront by the cliffs which sells potions. Some locals have become ill from items purchased there, but the store operator claims nothing they sell could harm anyone.

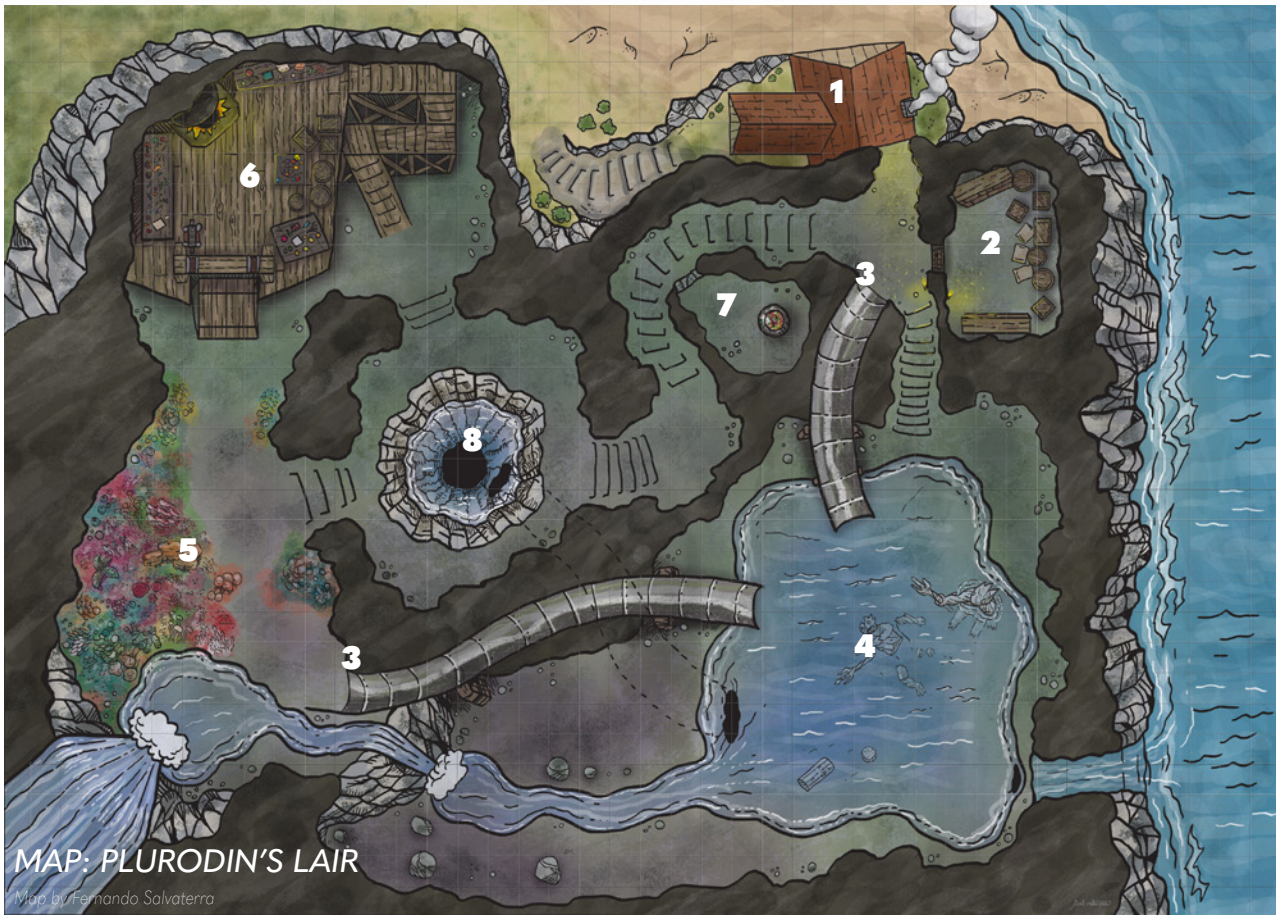
In either case, begin at the storefront with the Snake Oil Sycophant behind the counter. Describe them however you wish, but this is someone who would sell their own mother if they thought they could get away with it.

> The shop has a vast array of potions, oils, balms, and tinctures available—most far out of your price range. An eager looking shopkeep greets you as you enter.

If desired, allow the PCs to purchase health or stamina potions while engaging with the Sycophant. After a short time, a Hulking Bodyguard enters the shop.

> A giant brute squeezes through a door along the back wall and grunts while eyeing you suspiciously. "Store's closed."

They then lean close to the salesperson and "whisper", "Boss wants to see you."



MAP: PLURODIN'S LAIR

Map by Fernando Salvaterra

A PLURODIN'S LAIR

While wholly consumed with experimentation and the concoction of brews, the Plurodin understands resources are key to its obsession. Thus, Plurodin often build successful commercial empires, revolving around easily-created tinctures and potions, to fund their more exotic pursuits. They operate these ventures behind the scenes, allowing a carefully chosen liaison to handle the uninteresting aspects of buying and selling while the Plurodin swiftly churns out more product. Plurodin often work with giantfolk when they are in need of muscle, but prefer to find someone more in keeping with the locals and motivated by greed to use as their go-between in populated areas.

When choosing a place to cloister themselves to work, Plurodin prefer having access to open water, as well as somewhere to grow and cultivate rare ingredients so they don't have to waste valuable time searching for the more exotic components of their creations. Grottos, dormant volcanoes, and other cave systems are popular destinations.

1. STOREFRONT OR WAREHOUSE

The scope and functionality of these areas depends largely on who the Plurodin has selected to interface with society. This particular lair shows a full storefront where customers can come and purchase potions or rare ingredients and a living space for the store operator.

2. STORAGE

Dry goods, common tools, and other bulky items find a home in this rough-hewn cavern with a simple wooden door.

3. SLIDES

These could be old lava tubes, hand-carved tunnels—or in this case shaped metal plates—but they have been used so often by the plurodin they have become worn smooth and coated in clear slime. Any creature investigating one of these must make an Agility or Instinct Reaction Roll (12) or slide down the length of the tube.

4. UNDERGROUND POND AND RIVER

Water is vital to the Plurodin; their amphibious nature requires keeping their bodies moist. A river empties into the underground space from a hole in the roof and the cavern is open to the sea. The water level rises and falls with the tides. Ancient statues lie, barnacle-covered and crumbling, on the rock floor of the pond. They depict sea deities worshipped by long forgotten people who once inhabited this area.

5. FUNGAL FARM

Fungi and rare herbs often thrive in dark, wet environments. Many of these are staple ingredients for magical potions and tinctures. Plurodin are experts at cultivating these mystical growths and their gardens are priceless finds for alchemists and apothecaries. They can also be home to dangerous creatures, including the gardens' caretakers.

6. THE LABORATORY

A Plurodin's lab is any alchemist's dream. It is filled with every piece of elaborate equipment someone who makes potions and experiments with other magical concoctions could want. This lab includes an open-fire oven and a substantial rope-and-pulley elevator at the southern edge for hauling heavy items.

Plurodin will attempt to move any physical conflict away from their lab, but won't sacrifice themselves to save their investment, knowing they can simply start over in another location. Recouping their losses is usually a relatively simple task, begun by selling any potions they carry. Savvy creatures, they understand it is better to live to fight another day.

7. SECRET CHAMBER

This chamber is concealed by a moveable rock wall and contains a sizable and ancient vessel carved from pure obsidian which the Plurodin employs for specialized potion brewing.

8. THE CAULDRON

This lair contains a natural well which occasionally bubbles forth with scalding water heated by a lava flow deep beneath the surface. This super-heated, toxic water spills into the small lake via a connecting tunnel. Any creature entering the water must make a Strength or Agility Reaction Roll (14), taking 2d10 direct physical damage on a failure or half on a success.

GM NOTE:

Once the Bodyguard relays the message to the Sycophant, they attempt to quickly usher the PCs out the door. Depending on the PCs motives and aggressiveness, this might result in a fight, or they might try to sneak into the lair another way.

The Plurodin is convening a meeting in their lab (map area 6) to discuss abandoning the facility because some of the locals have become suspicious of what's going on. In addition, some of the "experimental" concoctions have produced unfavorable results and the Plurodin has no time for dissatisfied or belligerent customers.

For a party of 4, use the following:

- Plurodin
- 2 Hulking Bodyguards
- Snake Oil Sycophant (remove if they were defeated earlier)
- 4 Ingredient Gardeners

The Plurodin seeks to escape if they see the fight going against them. They use the Bodyguards as shields whenever possible. Liberally use their "Chugalug" action during the battle.

All creatures within the area when it is created or attempting to move through it must make a Strength Reaction Roll. Targets who fail are pulled to its center, taking 2d10+3 physical damage and becoming temporarily Restrained. Failed action rolls to escape are subjected to the damage again. Targets who succeed are thrown out of the area. The vortex does not affect the Leviathan.

Wave of Torment - Action: Choose two points within Far range. A forceful wave forms between these two points. Each time a PC makes an action roll, the wave moves a Very Close distance away from its starting points. YOUNG LEVIATHAN

LOST AT SEA

The party is on a voyage when their ship is attacked by a Naga Titan who punches a hole in the hull, grabbing an important NPC (the ship's captain or another of your own devising) then retreating into the water. As the ship takes on water, more naga flood in and a battle ensues. The party must fight through the caves of the Undersea Trench to find their friend before they are sacrificed to a Young Leviathan.

> The largest piece of the ship sinks deeper and deeper beneath the waves before settling to rest across a trench of churning lava. The water here is uncomfortably warm and you see a number of cave entrances along the river of molten rock. The ship's captain must be here... somewhere.

GM NOTE:

> The PCs are assumed to have some sort of magic or apparatus which allows them to breathe underwater for this encounter.

UNDERSEA TRENCH MAP

1. SHIPWRECK

The largest piece of the PCs' ship has landed here.

2. MOLTEN TRENCH

Lava roils along the sea bed here, creating a river beneath the sea surface.

3. CAVES

These areas house the Nagas along with other mysteries. Choose one to be the site of the impending sacrifice.

4. PERSPECTIVE VIEW

This view can help you with describing the scene.

Gauge the pace of play and be flexible about when to have the PCs discover the area for a final encounter to save the NPC from being sacrificed.

For a party of 4, use the following for the final scene:

- Young Leviathan
- Naga Eel Master
- Naga Sea Witch
- Naga Shoalstalker
- Naga Finscourge
- 4 Naga Reefwatchers

The Naga may scatter in shock if the Leviathan is defeated, or they may fight to the last.

OTHER ADVENTURE HOOKS

THE WRECK OF THE AURORA'S CREST

A large ship called the Aurora's Crest was sunk off the coast of a treacherous part of the ocean and only one of its crew survived. He told of a raging whirlpool that brought the ship down and claimed the treasure aboard was cursed. Among the treasures said to have been lost was The Crown of Dae'valyr, a centuries old relic said to hold the key to untold power. Many of the local adventurers have been gearing up to recover the ship's bounty, looking to hit it rich. The Aurora's Crest sunk near a volcanic trench where several sea-dwelling creatures congregate, as well as a group of Naga that guard the treasures that fall beneath the waves, using their spoils as sacrifice to a Kraken that lurks within the turbulent depths.

THE COURTSHIP OF BLURA VAL

A coastal fishing city has been attacked by a group of naga, capsizing boats and killing the fisherman as they haul in their catches. When the party is summoned to investigate, they find that the damage has been in response to a young ribbet named Blura absconding with their princess, Eckana T'vol. The party must find Eckana and return her, or convince the royal family to accept Blura into their royal court.

UNDERSEA TRENCH

Tier 2 Exploration

Beneath the waves, monsters congregate.

Impulses: Shelter, lead to danger, hide treasure, disorient

Difficulty: 15

FEATURES

Flotsam - Passive: Wrecks of ships taken down by the Naga litter the sea floor. PCs can make an Instinct or Knowledge Roll to discover more about a wreckage.

- Success with Fear: They find the name of the ship and what cargo it held, but all the items of worth are gone. When the "Patrols" reaction triggers, a creature of your choice has a Tier 2 weapon in their possession.
- Failure with Hope: Mark a Stress but lean on a character's goals (perhaps by pointing the way toward their goal).
- Failure with Fear: Activate "Boiling Fury" action below.

Boiling Fury - Action: Spend a Fear to have a lava vent burst out boiling water in a line upward. All targets within Very Close range of that line must succeed on an Agility Reaction Roll. Targets who fail take 2d6+6 magic damage and if they use armor to reduce the damage, they must mark 2 Armor Slots.

What is causing these eruptions? Are their warnings signs or sounds that give the party a sign?

No Escape Here - Action: Spend a Fear to cause an earthquake that collapses a tunnel or send the remains of a sunken ship crashing down on the PC heads. This could cause the party to split up or have to take a more dangerous route.

Did any of the PCs get caught in the falling debris? What alternative ways might there be out of this place?

Patrols - Reaction: Countdown (5). When the PCs enter the scene activate the countdown. When it triggers, have the triggering PC make a fate roll with their Fear die. The number is how many BP you have to spend on an encounter using the Naga in the Potential Adversaries section. Spend a Fear to restart the countdown.

Are the adversaries actively looking for the party? Do they catch the PCs off guard?

Grasping Vines - Action: Choose a point in the scene. All targets within a Very Close range of that point must succeed on an Agility or Instinct Reaction Roll. Targets who fail are Restrained by roots and vines until they break free with a Strength roll.

How does the corruption manifest in the plant life? How else might a target free itself?

The Very Earth Trembles - Action: Spend a Fear to send a shock wave through the swamp, toppling your choice of 1d4 of the standing stones. All creatures within Very Close range of those stones must make an Agility Reaction Roll. On a failure, the creature takes 3d20 physical damage and is Restrained and Vulnerable until they break free, clearing both conditions, with a Strength roll. Creatures who succeed must mark a Stress.

Do the PCs notice cracks in any of the stones which indicate instability? Could the PCs use unstable stones to their advantage?

The Mire is Mine! - Reaction: When the Primary Combatant enters the scene, begin a Countdown (Loop 3), which ticks down each time a PC rolls with Fear. When it triggers, black swarms of biting and stinging insects fly out from crevasses in the standing stones. All targets in the scene must make an Instinct Reaction Roll, taking 3d6 physical damage on a failure and half damage on a success.

Can the PCs do anything to shield themselves from the swarms? Do the insects remain and hamper visibility?

THE DREAD MIRE

For decades evil has festered quietly within the area known as the Dread Mire.

Now, however, something is stirring and the Dread Mire is growing.

The PCs have been tasked with discovering what corruption lies in the heart of the forbidden swamp and dealing with it once and for all... if they are able.

GM NOTE:

> Choose an entity who is fueling the Dread Mire's growth to use for the final confrontation. The Adult Murk Drake or the Bog Conjurer are excellent choices. Below are some suggested combinations of adversaries to associate with them.

For a party of 4 PCs:

- Adult Murk Drake
- Giant Crocodile
- (2) Bog Sirens
- (8) Juvenile Giant Crocodiles

or

- Bog Conjurer
- Vine Behemoth
- (2) Vine Serpents

MAP: HEART OF THE MIRE

The Heart is hidden within a large grotto, the entrance of which is obscured by a thicket of brambles. Over the centuries, water has carved out paths within the grotto, but the majority of the space is overgrown with vines and sickly blooming flora.

1. ENTRANCE

A murky stream runs into the grotto from the entrance, which is about 20 feet wide. Invoke the "Overwhelming Dread" passive when the party enters.

2. ROTTED ENCAMPMENT

Someone camped here in the past, but the remains have long since rotted. Touching anything causes it to crumble and fills the air with even more stench of festering decay.

MAP: THE DREAD MIRE

Map by Alan Tucker

3. STANDING STONES

Eight sets of ancient stones surround the Heart. They too have signs of the corruption which has seized the Heart and don't look entirely stable upon examination.

4. THE HEART

The Heart itself is an enormous stone, carved with runes and glyphs from unknown sources. It radiates power, but has been corrupted over a long period of time by the adversary you chose at the beginning of this encounter. The Heart is choked with vines and bears giant cracks in many places.

Potential Adversaries: Cinder Ant, Fire Beetles, Flame Fanner, Ignocerous, Spikeback Fire-Eater, Spitfire Rattler

FEATURES

Parched - Passive: Because of the lack of water and need to keep hydrated, PCs must succeed on a Strength or Instinct roll at the conclusion of each scene. On a failure, they must mark a Stress.

What can the PCs do to conserve water? Did they think ahead and bring extra? Can they find, or even create their own?

Dry Lightning - Action: Spend X Fear to introduce a rainless thunderstorm. Choose the smallest die that is greater than the number of PCs. For example, if you have 4 PCs, use a d6. Assign a number to each PC, then roll the die to determine the target of a lightning strike. If the number corresponds to a PC, they must make an Agility or Instinct Reaction Roll. On a failure, they take 3d8 direct magic damage and mark a Stress. On a success, they take half damage. If the number rolled is not assigned to a PC, the lightning strikes an area on the map of your choosing and starts an Open Fire. Roll the die again once for each Fear you spent on this move.

Ignocerous Territory - Reaction: When the PCs enter the domain of an Ignocerous, one appears at Very Far range of a PC it perceives as the biggest threat. Include 1d4+1 Flame Fanners along for the ride on its back.

Open Fires - Reaction: Whenever the ground cover or dry foliage are on fire, start a Countdown (Loop 1d4) which progresses each time the PCs fail or roll with Fear. When it triggers, 1d4 Fire Beetles emerge from the burnt area.

EXTRAPLANAR BREACH

Tier 3 Event

A portal has opened in an ancient ruin and unwanted visitors are staking a claim on your home.

Impulses: Unleash the troops, bend space, remake to familiarity

Difficulty: 17
Potential Adversaries: Chromatic Eel, Xeralyth (Concubine, Dragoon, Queen)

FEATURES

Queen is the Key - Passive: The Xeralyth Queen is holding the portal open with her psychic energy. When she is defeated, the portal closes.

How can the PCs discern this information? Is it possible to convince the Queen to close it of their own accord?

Light on Your Feet - Passive: The area within Very Far range of the portal has less gravity. Strength rolls made to lift objects have advantage. Strength rolls made to avoid forced movement have disadvantage and falling damage is halved.

Can the PCs use this to their advantage? How does it affect them to know reality is already being altered near the portal?

Time Bender - Passive: The area within Far range of the portal is fluctuating in time. When a PC takes the spotlight, they roll their duality dice. If their Hope die is higher, they can take two actions before passing the spotlight. If their Fear die is higher, they must mark a Stress before proceeding with their spotlight. If the numbers are equal, their spotlight proceeds as normal. No Hope or Fear are gained with this roll.

How does time warp around the PC after they make their roll?

Reinforcements! - Action: Spend a Fear to summon 1d4 Xeralyth Dragoons who appear within Melee range of the portal. PCs within Far range either mark a Stress or lose a Hope.

How do the PCs feel upon seeing more adversaries appear on the battlefield?

Targets must make an Agility Reaction Roll, taking 3d8 physical damage on a failure. Targets who succeed take half damage.

What do the jelly bombs look like? What happens when they explode?

ASTRAL INCURSION

The Harvest Festival is fast approaching and the city is buzzing with anticipation. Inns and hostels are full to overflowing and the mood is buoyant among the populace.

Things in the castle, however, are much more somber. Regular patrols of the vast wilderness to the north have run into trouble, with two having not returned in the past week. With resources strained by the upcoming celebration, leadership has decided to quietly summon the help of some local heroes to investigate the disappearances. The party is asked to determine the fate of the missing patrols and, if able, quell any potential threat which might be lurking in the area.

If reasonable, one or more of the PCs may have knowledge of the wilderness and be aware of an ancient ruin of standing stones within the forest. Its location roughly coincides with the region where the patrols went missing.

Allow the PCs to stock up on supplies, including consumables or other items they might deem necessary before embarking on their journey.

GM NOTE:

> Consider creating a traversal environment for the party to navigate before arriving at the ruins. They could potentially encounter Chromatic Eels or even some Xeralyth Dragoons besides other native denizens.

For the final confrontation, we recommend the following line up for a party of 4 PCs:

- Xeralyth Queen
- Xeralyth Concubine
- (2–3) Xeralyth Dragoons
- (2) Chromatic Eels

MAP: ASTRAL INCURSION

The area is lightly forested with trees and brush. As described in the event, the area around the portal is beginning to show signs of influence from the Astral Plane. Gravity and time itself are beginning to show the strain of the incursion.

The adversaries should be grouped closely by the portal with the Xeralyth Queen next to it, feeding her energies into maintaining it.

MAP: ASTRAL INCURSION

Map by Alan Tucker

1. PORTAL

The structure of the portal is metal and stone and a recent addition to the clearing. The Xeralyth Queen is keeping it open by channeling psychic energy into it, however they are able to engage with any interlopers while doing so. Attempts to topple the structure of the portal are unsuccessful.

2. STANDING STONE RUIN

The stones are ancient and worn, some having crumbled over time. GMs may wish to have the players add some lore regarding the area and the ruin, or simply allow it to remain a mystery.

PRISON CITY PYRRHEXIS

Tier 4 Social

This city of burning ash and iron bars in the center of the Circle of the Burned is home to the souls of the damned.

Impulses: Exhaust, lie, cheat, steal but don't get caught

Difficulty: 20

Potential Adversaries: Demons (Any), Hellish Army (Ashen Demon King, Cinderwretch, Flamereaver, Greater Fire Demon, Pyrothurge)

FEATURES

The Palace of Spite - Passive: The large metal fortress of the Ashen Demon King rises at the center of this Circle. It radiates malevolence and hatred. When a PC rolls a failure with Fear while in the Circle, you gain an extra Fear.

Are any of the characters susceptible to the overwhelming feelings of evil in the place? What sorts of everyday occurrences are made more evil in the Circle of the Burned?

Burning Hells - Passive: Souls banished here during the Earliest Age scheme endlessly. PCs attempting to barter or gain information must make a Presence Roll (18).

- On a Critical Success: they learn three of the below details.
- On a Success: If the roll is a success with Hope, they learn two details. On a success with Fear they learn one, but mark a Stress.
- On a Failure: They are surrounded by members of the Hellish Army or adversaries of your choosing. Killing these adversaries might direct the party to an NPC who wishes to help them, for a price.
- Details: At the center of Pyrrhexis is the Palace of Spite. The Ashen Demon King sits the throne in the Palace and is the chief jailor of souls in the Circle; he alone judges their weight and worth. The singular rule of Pyrrhexis is that one must give up something of equal value to that which they gain.

Who might the PCs ask for information? What does it cost to gain this information?

Temptations - Action: Trade and markets exist in this city, but coins have little value here. The denizens instead deal in the souls of the dead and favors from the living that come to the city. A demonic merchant offers the PCs a Tier 4 piece of armor or weapon for a favor. If the party refuses, all PCs mark a Stress.

What favor is the merchant asking for? What dangers do the PCs face if they accept?

Ashen Landscape - Reaction: Countdown (Loop 8). The air is sulphuric and the winds strip flesh from bone. When the PCs enter the Circle of the Burned, activate the countdown. When it triggers, all characters must succeed on a Strength or Instinct Reaction Roll. Targets who fail mark a Stress and take a cumulative –1 penalty to their action rolls while they remain in the Circle of the Burned. A PC that clears all its stress can remove the penalty.

What are some ways one might combat this hostile environment? Are there services in the city the PCs can gain access to that might protect them?

THE METAL THRONE OF SIN

Tier 4 Event

The evil heart at the center of the Circle of the Burned, the Throne of Sin.

Impulses: Rule with authority, bring down, undermine, inexhaustible locus of hatred

Difficulty: 20

Potential Adversaries: Hellish Army (Ashen Demon King, Cinderwretch, Flamereaver, Greater Fire Demon, Pyrothurge)

FEATURES

Weight of Your Sins - Passive: Features that cost Hope to use require the PC to mark a Stress as well.

What hidden secrets weigh down the PCs? Does confession help, or make the Throne's power grow stronger?

Flames of Excoriation - Action: A demon sitting on the Throne can mark a Stress to choose a target within Far range to make a Presence Reaction Roll (18). On a failure, the target takes 4d8 magic damage and starts a Penance Countdown (4). It ticks down each time the target has the spotlight. While this countdown is active, the target is compelled to attack their allies. For each spotlight they take that does not follow this compulsion, they must mark 2 Stress. The countdown ends early if the target succeeds on a Presence Roll or if the Demon chooses another target. The demon sitting on the Throne can mark a Stress to force the target to take the spotlight.

What secret frustrations does the Throne play upon? What would happen if a PC were to sit on the Throne?

Risen From Flames - Action: Twice per scene, spend a Fear to summon a Greater Fire Demon that appears within Far range of the Throne and immediately takes the spotlight as if you had paid the cost of its "Ramp Up" feature.

What tells you that this creature's loyalties can be bartered for?

A New Lord of Hell - Reaction: Chase Countdown (6, 3). If a PC sits upon the Throne, activate both countdowns. The first ticks down each time they make an action roll to intimidate, belittle, or exert power over another, or if a creature succeeds on a Presence Roll (18) to pledge unswerving loyalty to the PC. If the action roll is a critical success, it ticks down twice. The second ticks down each time they fail. If the first countdown triggers, the PC gains control of the Throne and becomes the Lord of the Circle of the Burned. If the second countdown triggers, the PC makes a death move.

What does it mean to control the Throne of Sin? What does this mean for the other PCs?

ATK: +6 | Flame: Melee | 4d6+10 mag

FEATURES

Shadow - Passive: The Tortured Soul has resistance to physical damage. Mark a Stress to move from one shadow to another within Far range.

While Weighed Down, their evasion is halved. The target can break free by admitting their regrets and making a successful Presence Roll (15). On a failure, the target marks a HP.
