Introduction

A Note From The Author

Have you ever been somewhere foreign and thought to yourself, “Man, I really miss home right now”?

I can relate to this sentiment, especially when I have to use the public toilets.

Or maybe you never had a safe place to call home, and the thought of a welcoming “home,” although foreign, sounds alluring for some unknown reason.

Some people call this feeling “homesickness,” but the truth of the matter goes much deeper than this.

With some realistic roleplay, your adventurers can also feel such feelings as they muck about in your open world of endless outcomes!

Now a warm, friendly tavern full of laughter and and excitement can (temporarily) satisfy the soul’s longing for home.

On the flip side, a dark and menacing tavern filled with angry stares and bitter remarks can increase the longing in one’s heart for “home” all the more!

I’m looking for an everlasting home - not a building made by human hands, but a place of acceptance where “loved” is not a badge of honour you earn, but it’s who you are.

When you come across a home like this one, please let me know.

Until then, I’ll be here writing books for you. So without further ado, here’s Roll Me A Tavern :)

Have fun with it my friend!

- Your NPC, Assassin

Chapter 1. Concept

Let's start by building the concept of your tavern! What does it look like? What does it smell like? And where did it come from?

These are a few of the questions we will be answering in this chapter.

A) Names

Let's start off by naming your tavern! For simplicity sake, let's make the name of your tavern two words long.

Below are 4000 possible name combinations for your tavern! Simply roll from the adjective table for your first word, then choose from one of the four "noun tables" to roll for your second word! (You won't run out of names here lol.)

See table on the following page...

7	Lobster
8	Owl
9	Rabbit

Name Example...

I rolled a 79 on the adjective table (with a 1d100) for the word "Sanguine", I rolled a 4 on the noun table (with a 1d4) for the fourth table "animal", and a 1 on the animal table (with a 1d10) for the word "Alpaca".

Add "The" in front of the name to finish it off!

I now have the edgy-sounding tavern known as "The Sanguine Alpaca."

B) Size & Income

Size determines what you can fit in your tavern, and income determines how much of it you can buy. Roll below to determine both!

I) Size

How large is your tavern? (Roll 1d4)

1. Tiny
A little outdoor stall or wagon with a bar and stools that can comfortably sit around 5 patrons.

2. Small
A small building for dining that can comfortably sit around 25 patrons.

3. Medium
A building with a couple floors for sleeping and dining that can comfortably sit around 100 patrons.

4. Large
A building with multiple floors for sleeping and dining that can comfortably sit 250+ patrons.

II) Income

How wealthy is your tavern? (Roll 1d4)

1. Impoverished
A vermin-infested, hole-in-the wall that would instantly be shut down by the FDA.

2. Poor
A tavern that has decent traffic and return customers, but is barely able to scrape by or make ends meet. Your everyday struggling restaurant.

3. Wealthy
A well-to-do business that is turning a profit. The owner probably retired their parents early.

4. Opulent
A bedazzling experience of the most exotic kind filled with delicacies fit to captivate and entertain nobility from across the realms.

C) Vibe & Style

Let's create some atmosphere! We want your players to FEEL your tavern! We'll start with the vibe, then use that vibe to create your architectural style.

I) Vibe

The atmosphere of a place is often dictated by the personality of the people who go there.

Because people generally hang out with groups who are similar to them, cultures will quickly form within these cliques.

For example, a tavern full of peaceful people would shun people who disrupt that peace, and attract people who desire peace themselves.

Below are a list of atmospheres (or "vibes") you can add to your tavern.

If you're making an upbeat tavern, pick or roll 1d8 for an upbeat vibe from the table below.

1d8	Vibe
1	Helpful
2	Jolly
3	Peaceful
4	Tolerant
5	Friendly
6	Good-natured
7	Chill
8	Prim-and-proper

If you're making a darker tavern, pick or roll 1d12 for a darker vibe from the table below.

1d12	Vibe
1	Conniving
2	Horny
3	Filthy
4	Boastful
5	Deceitful
6	Wicked
7	Hateful
8	Argumentative
9	Miserable
10	Greedy
11	Death
12	Hopelessness

Now that you have a vibe, let's communicate this vibe to your players. While there's no harm in saying, "The bar feels hopeless," you can make your descriptions a lot more convincing by describing the vibe through the lens of your player's five senses.

For example...
"You hear a low murmur from one of the nearby patrons, and see a look of resignation on their face. The bartender looks like he hasn't slept in weeks as his sullen expression gazes into the wall, his mind on problems elsewhere."

It doesn't even have to be that complex! You can turn "The bar feels friendly" into, "The barkeep gives you a chirpy 'hello!' as you enter the tavern to hear dwarves laughing, and having a good time." Smells are another powerful way to convey the vibe of your tavern.

For example...
You can turn "The bar feels like death," to, "The putrid smell of rotting flesh meets your nostrils as a mottled rat scurries into its hole. The barkeeper's piercing eyes give you a soul-rending glare as you walk in the front door.

II) Style

Now that we have the size, income level, and vibe of your tavern, let's choose a visual style your players can picture.

If you chose an upbeat vibe, maybe your tavern has pillars of quartz with pristine greek architecture, or is situated in a warm and homely cottage parlour.

If you chose a darker vibe, maybe your tavern has limestone archways that join beneath intricate gothic architecture, or is situated in an old, run-down hotel that's slowly falling apart.

A broad description such as "greek" or "gothic" can go a long ways. Below are some archetypical descriptions you can use when describing the visual style of your tavern to your players.

Architectural Style

1d8	Style
1	Cottage
2	Gothic
3	Greek
4	Renaissance
5	Tribal
6	Tudor
7	Victorian
8	Viking

Feel free to use architectural styles from other cultures if they better fit your setting.

See Chapter 4, section B) Exhibits, for more ideas on ways you can stylize your tavern.

D) Story

Every person, place, and thing has a story. Let's write a quick story for your tavern!

I) History

For the sake of this book, let's assume your bartender owns this tavern. How did your bartender acquire it? Roll 1d20 from the table below to find out!

Your bartender...

1d20	Inception
1-8	Started it
9-14	Inherited it
15-17	Won it
18-20	Stole it

II) Challenge

Every business has its hurdles to overcome! Give your tavern a challenge they're facing right now. They might even get the players involved in finding a solution if the barkeep thinks they can help!

Roll 1d4 for a business challenge.

1d4	Challenge
1	Not enough customers
2	Competition is too fierce
3	Patrons aren't paying up
4	Supplier quit delivering stock

III) Secret

Juicy secrets are a great way to GRAB your players' attention! Let's throw a juicy secret into your tavern's story, and then combine it all together on your tavern template (found in Appendix A)!

1d20	Secret
1	Food is laced with addictive substances
2	Has a legendary relic hidden in plain sight
3	Has a githyanki portal in the bathroom upstairs
4	Has a mimic in one of the bedrooms
5	Has undead in the basement who work as cheap labor
6	Is indebted to the local crime syndicate
7	Is part of a trafficking ring
8	Is part of a narcotics ring
9	Is part of an underground fighting ring
10	Is part of a dark and bloody cult
11	Is secretly not really serving alcohol, but everyone thinks they are
12	Is the entrance to the local black market
13	Is a gateway to the underdark
14	Is a vampire bar that serves blood after dark
15	Is a poison-brewing factory
16	Is a front for the local resistance group
17	Disappears every full moon and is replaced by a hill
18	Pickpockets their patrons
19	Serves spoiled meat in its dishes
20	Was built to spy on your adventurers

Chapter 2. Barkeep

Your barkeep is the living manifestation of your tavern's heart and soul!

I've made name generators with 8,000 names in the past, so I won't be including a name generator here. If you really can't think of a name for your barkeep, just go with "Tom."

This chapter will focus on giving your barkeep a living personality that feels real and authentic! So without further ado, let's begin!

A) Unique Experience

For starters, let's give your barkeep a unique experience! This is the event in their life that they "wear on their sleeve."

Everyone in the tavern knows about it, and when a new person walks in, you can bet they'll hear the story.

Roll 1d12 for a unique experience.

1d12	Experience
1	Died and was brought back
2	Defected gang member
3	Ex preacher
4	Has twelve daughters
5	Lived on a pirate ship
6	Raised by orcs
7	Served in the military
8	Studied at a prestigious university
9	Traveled to the astral and back
10	Was a prisoner of the crown
11	Was a school teacher
12	Won a famous gambling match

B) Secret

Next, let's give your barkeep a secret they keep close to their chest!

Roll 1d10 for your barkeep's secret.

1d10	Secret
1	Can't read
2	Can't do math
3	Is a wanted adventurer in hiding
4	Zombie son lives in the tavern
5	Evil artifact brings in customers
6	Harvests souls to pay off a debt
7	Betrays close friends for money
8	Knows all audible languages
9	Is a member of the royal family
10	Collects faces for doppelgangers

C) Prejudice

Even people who say they don't have prejudice often carry some degree of resentment in their hearts towards a certain group or sect of people.

Below are 5E racial groups, but you are welcome to expand your barkeep's prejudice to social groups too. Maybe your barkeep is prejudiced towards people who are really good at math...

Roll 1d10 for your barkeep's prejudice.

1d10	Prejudice
1	Bird-like (aarakocra, kenku, etc.)
2	Celestial-touched (aasimar, etc.)
3	Fey-folk (centaur, fairies, satyr, etc.)
4	Giant-kind (firbolgs, goliaths, etc.)
5	Goblinoids (bugbears, goblins, hobgoblins, etc.)
6	Hairy-folk (tabaxi, shifters, werewolves, etc.)
7	Infernal-touched (tieflings, etc.)
8	Orcs (half-orc, orc, etc.)
9	Reptile-like (dragonborn, lizardfolk, kobolds, etc.)
10	Short-humanoids (dwarves, gnomes, halflings etc.)

We all have some semblance of a reason, whether founded or unfounded, to support our prejudice.

Giving a reason for your barkeep's prejudice will make it feel a whole lot more authentic to your players!

Roll 1d6 to give your barkeep a reason for their prejudice.

1d6	Reason
1	They believe your kind has dangerous powers
2	They believe bad luck follows your kind
3	Your kind cheated them
4	Your kind enslaved their kind
5	Your kind slaughtered their kin
6	You look different

D) Partiality

In the same way we show prejudice, we also show partiality to certain people or social groups. Degrees of partiality shown will differ from person to person, your crazy aunt being more partial to others than you (obviously).

The stereotypes say that guys are partial to pretty women, and women are partial to wealthy men, but we all know this is nothing more than a stereotype with no semblance of reality or truth behind it, right?

So, let's give your barkeep some partiality we can play with!

Once again, below are racial groups, but you are welcome to expand your barkeep's partiality to social groups aswell. Maybe your barkeep is partial towards thicc patrons? I won't judge...

Roll 1d10 to give your barkeep a partiality (reroll if same result as prejudice).

1d10	Partiality
1	Bird-like (aarakocra, kenku, etc.)
2	Celestial-touched (aasimar, etc.)
3	Fey-folk (centaur, fairies, satyr, etc.)
4	Giant-kind (firbolgs, goliaths, etc.)
5	Goblinoids (bugbears, goblins, hobgoblins, etc.)
6	Hairy-folk (tabaxi, shifters, werewolves, etc.)
7	Infernal-touched (tieflings, etc.)
8	Orcs (half-orc, orc, etc.)
9	Reptile-like (dragonborn, lizardfolk, kobolds, etc.)
10	Short-humanoids (dwarves, gnomes, halflings etc.)

We all have subconscious reasons that fuel our partialities. Let's give a subconscious reason to your barkeep!

Roll 1d6 to give your barkeep a reason for their partiality.

1d6	Reason
1	They think you're hot
2	They think your kind brings good luck
3	Your kind saved their life
4	Your kind helped advance and develop their kind
5	Your kind always leaves a fat tip
6	They are scared of your kind

Pro Tip: Giving a reason for the way your NPC's or monsters behave makes them feel so much more believable to your players. Find reasons.

Chapter 3. Food & Drink

Suspicious voice: "Come fill ya belly with our scrumptious food, darling."

A) Food

Everybody's gotta eat, even players who don't keep track of their rations.

I) Food Table With Prices

Below is an excerpt of bites and consumables found on page 158 of The Player's Handbook, followed by their corresponding prices for easy reference (see the remaining segments of this section for more variety and flair when serving your players food and drink).

Item	Cost
Banquet (per person)	10 gp
Bread, loaf	2 cp
Cheese, hunk	1 sp
Meals (per day)
Squalid	3 cp
Poor	6 cp
Modest	3 sp
Comfortable	5 sp
Wealthy	8 sp
Aristocratic	2 gp
Meat, chunk	3 sp

II) Rich & Poor Food

Let's begin with some expensive dishes for creative flair! If your tavern is "wealthy" or "opulent" (see Chapter 1, section B) Size & Income), then consider adding some "fancy dishes" for your players to enjoy!

Roll 1d8 for a fancy dish.

1d8	Fancy Dish
1	Caviar on Cream Toast
2	Salted Pineapple Slices
3	Lobster Frittata
4	Platter of Grapes & Cheeses
5	Living Oysters
6	Hazelnut & Truffle Soup
7	Marinated Pufferfish Liver
8	Bird-Nest Jelly

Not all taverns can afford filet mignon! Perhaps an old farm horse recently died, or the local tabby cat went missing… If your tavern is strapped for change, choose a budget dish to serve your players from the table below!

Roll one or more d6 for your tavern's budget dish.

1d6	Budget Dish
1	Stinging Nettle Salad
2	Watercress Stew
3	Dulse Strips
4	Oatmeal
5	Soggy Potato
6	Suspicious Meats

This meat smells rather suspicious, but It all tastes like chicken… right?

If your budget dish is "suspicious meats," roll below to determine your meaty contents!

1d8	Suspicious Meat
1	Cat
2	Dog
3	Horse
4	Rat
5	Zombie
6	Flumph
7	Snake
8	Mealworm

III) Themed Flavours

Most people have different affinities towards certain flavors. Some people love overdosing on sugar, while others can't handle the slightest hint of spice! To make your tavern more memorable, add a (dominant) underlying flavour to your tavern's dishes.

Roll 1d6 to give your tavern's dishes a dominant flavour.

1d6	Flavour
1	Bitter
2	Salty
3	Sweet
4	Sour
5	Spicy
6	Umami

Roll 1d4 to determine your flavour's strength!

1d4	Strength
1	Hint
2	Mild
3	Strong
4	Overpowering

B) Drink

This section is all about the drink. You look like I need a drink. Wait.

I) Basic Drinks

Basic drinks first, fancy drinks later! You can add these drinks to your tavern menu.

Roll 1d4 on the table below, or use the wealth guide provided to determine your stock.

1d4	Stocked Beverages
1	Beer
2	Cider
3	Mead
4	Wine

Optional wealth guide...

Impoverished: Beer
Poor: Beer, & Cider OR Mead
Wealthy: All
Opulent: All

Below are the harder liquors. They're not only harder to drink, but harder to get as well! Roll your stock based on the wealth guide provided.

Impoverished: 1d8
Poor: 2d8
Wealthy: 4d8
Opulent: All

1d8	Stocked Liquors
1	Absinthe
2	Brandy
3	Gin
4	Rum
5	Sake
6	Tequila
7	Vodka
8	Whiskey

"What will we do with a drunken sailor early in the morning?"
-an olde Irish question

II) Signature Drinks

You can use the tables found in this section to make your own signature drinks! Add a spot of magic, if you dare…

For starters, let's give your signature drink an iconic name by combining two words together like we did in the beginning! (We're getting good at this.)

Next, how would you visually describe the liquid?

1d8	Appearance
1	Clear
2	Colorful
3	Dark
4	Exotic
5	Fruity
6	Lumpy
7	Murky
8	Shimmering

Your drink is shaping up! Now let's add an [optional] magical effect to it.

For the duration, you…

1d20	Effect
1	Fall in love with the first person you see
2	Turn random luminescent colours
3	Smell like the last thing you ate
4	Grow your hair at a visibly fast rate
5	Can taste sound and colours
6	Gain +2 wisdom, but your intelligence is halved
7	Gain +4 strength, and lose 1d4 hit points every 6 seconds until you reach 0 hit points, at which point you simply fall unconscious for the remainder of the effect
8	Begin laughing uncontrollably, and have the ability to breathe underwater
9	Receive a burst of bravery, becoming immune to the fear effect
10	Begin floating as your weight becomes 0 lbs
11	Lose your eyesight but gain blindsight, 30 ft.
12	Lose any exhaustion or diseases
13	See a vague, blurry depiction of the near future
14	Gain the ability to jump twice as high as normal
15	Think the first person you see is in love with you
16	Think you can read and speak every language
17	Think you can hear people's thoughts
18	Think animals and insects are talking to you
19	Think you can move things with your mind
20	Think people are afraid of your power

Optional: Constitution saving throw (DC 12)

And finally, how long does this effect last on your players?

Your signature drink's magical effects last for…

1d4	Duration
1	1 minute
2	20 minutes
3	1 hour
4	8 hours

Most taverns will only have one signature drink. An opulent tavern may have more.

III) Pricing

Now you may be asking yourself, "How much should I price my drinks?"

Here's a general idea for pricing singular beverages (one glass or shot).

Common drink: 2 CP
Expensive drink: 2 SP - 2 GP
Magical drink: 5-25 GP

Chapter 4. Entertainment

Perhaps your tavern wants to make a few extra bucks on the side! Adding entertainment options to your tavern is a great way to increase both your customers, and your income.

This chapter covers the most common forms of entertainment, along with a few fun ideas you can steal for your games!

A) Dance

Dancing (well) makes a person look attractive. That's why ancient kings would give up to half of their kingdoms away to young women who knew how to dance (search up Mark 6:22-23 on your browser).

Adding dancers into your tavern can make your tavern far more attractive, or far more cringe if you fill it with dancers who think they can dance but actually suck.

The latter can be a fun way to alleviate tension with your players and give everyone a good laugh.

There are two types of dancing in taverns: 1) Performances, and 2) Parties. People watch a performance, but they participate at a party.

If you want to create a dance party encounter in your tavern for your players, you can give your tavern "scheduled dance nights" for specific styles of dance. Below is a table of dance styles you can select for your tavern's dance night.

1d6	Styles
1	Ballroom Night
2	Line Dancing Night
3	Salsa Night
4	Square Dancing Night
5	Swing Night
6	Tap Dancing Night

You are of course, not limited to the styles of dance shown, and may include more modern genres of dance in your tavern as you see fit.

To spice things up, have a brave NPC ask one of your players to dance with them!

B) Exhibits

Exhibits are a great way to captivate patrons in any given location, and taverns are no exception!

An exhibit could be spoils from a hunt, the paintings of an artist, sculptures, or even live animals in terrariums!

Your exhibits may be tied in closely with your tavern's name. For example, if your tavern is called the "Flaming Salamander," it may showcase a pit filled with well-fed komodo dragons in the center.

Generally, one themed exhibit is more than enough to dramatically add to the vibe of your tavern. Below are some categories of exhibits to get your brain juices flowing:

Roll 1d10 for some randomization, or pick an exhibit category from the table below.

1d10	Category
1	Animals
2	Armor
3	Paintings
4	Relics
5	Scavenged goods
6	Sculptures
7	Skins
8	Tusks
9	Weapons
10	Writings

C) Games

Who hasn't been addicted to a game or two in their lifetime? Fantasy taverns are no different!

Games are a fun way to keep patrons in your tavern for extended periods of time!

Have fun watching your players try to cheat and swindle the tavern patrons for every penny they've got with these tried and true tavern games.

Choose your favourites, or roll 1d6 for some randomization!

1d8	Games
1	Billiards
2	Bowling
3	Cards*
4	Darts
5	Dice
6	Drinking
7	Shuffleboard
8	Trivia

You could even bring a physical deck of 52 playing cards along with you to your sessions and have your players play out actual games of cards for that hands-on effect.*

D) Plays & Dramas

Plays and dramas have been a popular form of entertainment for thousands of years! You might throw a play into your tavern as your players walk in to add mystique to your encounter.

Pro Tip: Think of tavern plays as the white noise in the background. You don't have to act out the entire play to your players! Simply describe the general idea of what's going on. A vague, 10-second description of one of Shakespeare's plays will more than suffice!

E) Songs

Music is arguably the most evocative art form of all time, so consider throwing a band or performer on the stage at your tavern.

No need to go into gritty detail describing your tavern's live musical performance, simply pick a genre for the music being performed and a subject the band or performer is singing about (at most).

This will create an atmosphere in your tavern that will dictate the way your players will act at a subconscious level. It's basically mind-control lite.

You can add an extra layer of realism by roleplaying an argument between your barkeep and performers after the barkeep says they're being paid with "exposure" instead of gold.

F) Storytelling

As a GM, you could do this for a living, so have fun, and go nuts! If you're creative with your delivery, you can reveal the key elements of your player's objectives for that session in your tavern's storytelling encounter.

For example...
Let's say your players need to overthrow an evil witch queen from the nearby forest. They enter a tavern, and an old man is leaning over a table telling a chilling story to a group of half-a-dozen patrons about the horrors of the local witch who feeds children to the giant spiders. Your players will be all over that.

Chapter 5. Other Services

Your tavern may have more to offer than just food and entertainment!

This chapter is your metaphorical buffet of tavern services. Cherry pick and choose the services you want your tavern to have!

A) Accomodations

Accomodations can be found in medium to large taverns. Below is a pricing guide for the cost of accommodations based on the wealth level of your tavern.

Cost per night	Tavern wealth level
7 cp	Impoverished
3-8 sp	Poor
1-3 gp	Wealthy
4+ gp	Oppulent

In addition to a bed to sleep on, some rooms may have more amenities than others making them more expensive. Below is a list of amenities you can add to your tavern rooms.

Pick from the list below, or roll up to 3d6.

1d6	Amenity
1	Bedpan
2	Fireplace
3	Heating Pipes
4	Lamps
5	Mirrors
6	Windows

B) Quest Board

Keep your players busy for days with your tavern's quest board! You will find ideas for both quests and rewards in this segment.

I) Quests

Below is a quest generator you can use in any of your games to make sure you don't run out of quests anytime soon.

Each quest will look like this: "Help [Name] [Action] [Target]."

The quest generator below has 400 possible quest combinations. I've made name tables with 8,000 names in the past, so I won't be including a name table here. If you really can't think of a [Name] for your quest giver, just go with "Bob."

Roll 1d20 for the action of your quest.

1d20	Action
1	Attack
2	Burn
3	Capture
4	Collect
5	Convince
6	Defend
7	Deliver (to)
8	Establish
9	Extract
10	Free
11	Guide
12	Hide (from)
13	Incriminate
14	Negotiate (with/for)
15	Neutralize
16	Protect
17	Recover
18	Steal (from)
19	Tame
20	Threaten

Roll 1d20 for the target of your quest.

1d20	Target
1	The Apple(s)
2	The Bandit(s)
3	The Bear(s)
4	The Child(ren)
5	The Competitor(s)
6	The Foreigner(s)
7	The Ghost(s)
8	The Giant(s)
9	The Goblin(s)
10	The Hunter(s)
11	The Orc(s)
12	The Relic(s)
13	The Rodent(s)
14	The Scholar(s)
15	The Slave(s)
16	The Spider(s)
17	The Tavern(s)
18	The Tribe(s)
19	The Troll(s)
20	The Vampire(s)

Now put it all together! You can add the words or letters in brackets if they make more sense.

I rolled a "2" for my action and an "8" for my target, so using the framework "Help [Name] [Action] [Target]", my quest looks like this:

"Help Bob burn the giants."

Once you roll your quest framework, turn the concept into a sentence and stick it onto your quest board.

For example, I will now turn this framework:

"Help Bob burn the giants."

Into Bob's handwriting pasted on a quest board:

"The local hill giant burned down my farm. Looking for muscle to help me settle the score."

Have fun with your quest generator!

Pro tip: I recommend having five or less quests on your quest board so as not to overwhelm your players with too many options.

II) Rewards

Below are some reward ideas you can give out to your players.

Roll 1 or more d10, or choose from the list below.

1d10	Reward
1	Gold pieces
2	"Keep the loot you find"
3	Weapons
4	Armor
5	Consumables
6	Information
7	Relic
8	Pets
9	Land
10	Status

C) Storage

Perhaps one day, your players will learn that they cannot realistically carry the weight of the world on their shoulders. That's when rentable storage comes into play!

Your tavern may offer to store goods in exchange for money over time.

Side quest: To spice up your world, consider how secure your tavern storage area is, and how susceptible it may be to attack. Maybe your players stored their valuables inside of your tavern only to come back days later to find their goods looted, and the tavern razed to the ground! That's an extreme example, but an idea nonetheless.

Match the cost of item storage with your in-game economy (AKA how much gold your players are flaunting around). I personally wouldn't charge more than 1 gp for storage per player.

D) Spellcasting

Taverns with spellcasters on the payroll may offer simple spellcasting services! If you'd like to include this feature in your tavern, look up the cantrip spell lists and give a few cantrips to one of your tavern servers or staff members.

Your players could benefit from services such as Mending, or Prestidigitation. Here's an optional pricing guide for tavern cantrip services:

Charge 1 gp for a single job, and an additional 1 gp for each consecutive minute the job takes.

Your tavern may also offer healing and other spells for a higher price. You may add these as you see fit.

E) Mail

Taverns were often used as mail hubs before addresses were well established. Consider sending mail to your players from their allies across the realms in your tavern, or add mystique by sending them mail from a secret admirer!

F) Grooming

Providing your players the chance to clean up before making an unforgettable impression. Consider offering your players these services if you (as the GM) know they are going to be going to a fancy event in the near future.

I) For Patrons

Baths are a thing! If your tavern is exceptionally wealthy, you can also consider offering relaxing massages for a heftier price.

Toothbrushes and teeth-cleaning rags are also things you may offer, but you don't necessarily need to go to THIS level of detail unless you think if would add personality to your tavern.

For example, maybe you have a bartender who's an absolute clean freak who WANTS your players to be washed down BEFORE they go to sleep in your white-washed rooms.

II) For Pets

Stabling is a thing! Just like a parking lot keeps cars, horses and mounts have to be stored and tended to while their riders enjoy a night out at the pub.

Throw a stable on the backside of your tavern for the pets and mounts. This is not mandatory, but a "nice to have." You can make up any price for stabling, and your players will believe you and probably pay for it, because they love their in-game pets more than most of your in-game humans.

G) Staff

Now that you have your tavern size, income, and services down, let's fill your tavern with staff!

Below is a rough guide on "servers-to-tavern size" depending on what you rolled up in "Chapter 1, section B) Size & Income."

Additional tavern servers by tavern size:
Tiny: 0
Small: 1
Medium: 2-4
Large: 5-8

Once you have your servers, you can add additional staff members to keep your place running based on the number of services your tavern has to offer.

Additional staff members by tavern income & number of services offered:
Impoverished: 1 staff per 2 services
Poor: 1 staff per 1 service
Wealthy: 2 staff per 1 service
Opulent: 4 staff per 1 service

Pro tip: Name your staff members after what they do. For example, call the person who works in the stables the "stablehand." If a staff member does more than one job, just call them "Bob."
